During the International Season of the series “Survival Manual for the 21st Century”, actor and activist Marcos Palmeira will travel to diverse regions of the world to search out alternatives for the severe socio-environmental problems that currently plague the planet. Considering our planet as a single system, and that what happens in the USA or in India also affects Brazilians directly, we aim to understand how groups around the world are dealing with matters that include food production, water conservation, and finding an ecological substitute for plastic.
